MANUFACTURING PROCESS

Understanding how the best cotton Linen is created

Cotton
Farming &
Harvesting

- Cotton is grown all over the world but the biggest cotton-growing nations are China, India, the United States, Brazil and Pakistan. Cotton bolls are mechanically harvested and then are packaged into large bales for transportation to a cotton mill

Ginning

- Cotton fibres are separated from seeds and pods. Clean lint is then sent to Textile Mills

Carding

- At textile mills very short fibers are filtered out and the longer fibers are processed by a carding machine that combs and aligns the fibers into a long, soft rope called a sliver

Spinning

- The sliver is taken to a spinning frame to be spun into thread. The machine draws out individual cotton fibers from the sliver and twists them into a thin thread. Plying if required is also done during spinning

Weaving

- Cotton threads are taken to the loom to be woven into cloth. Weave pattern and thread count is generated as per requirement

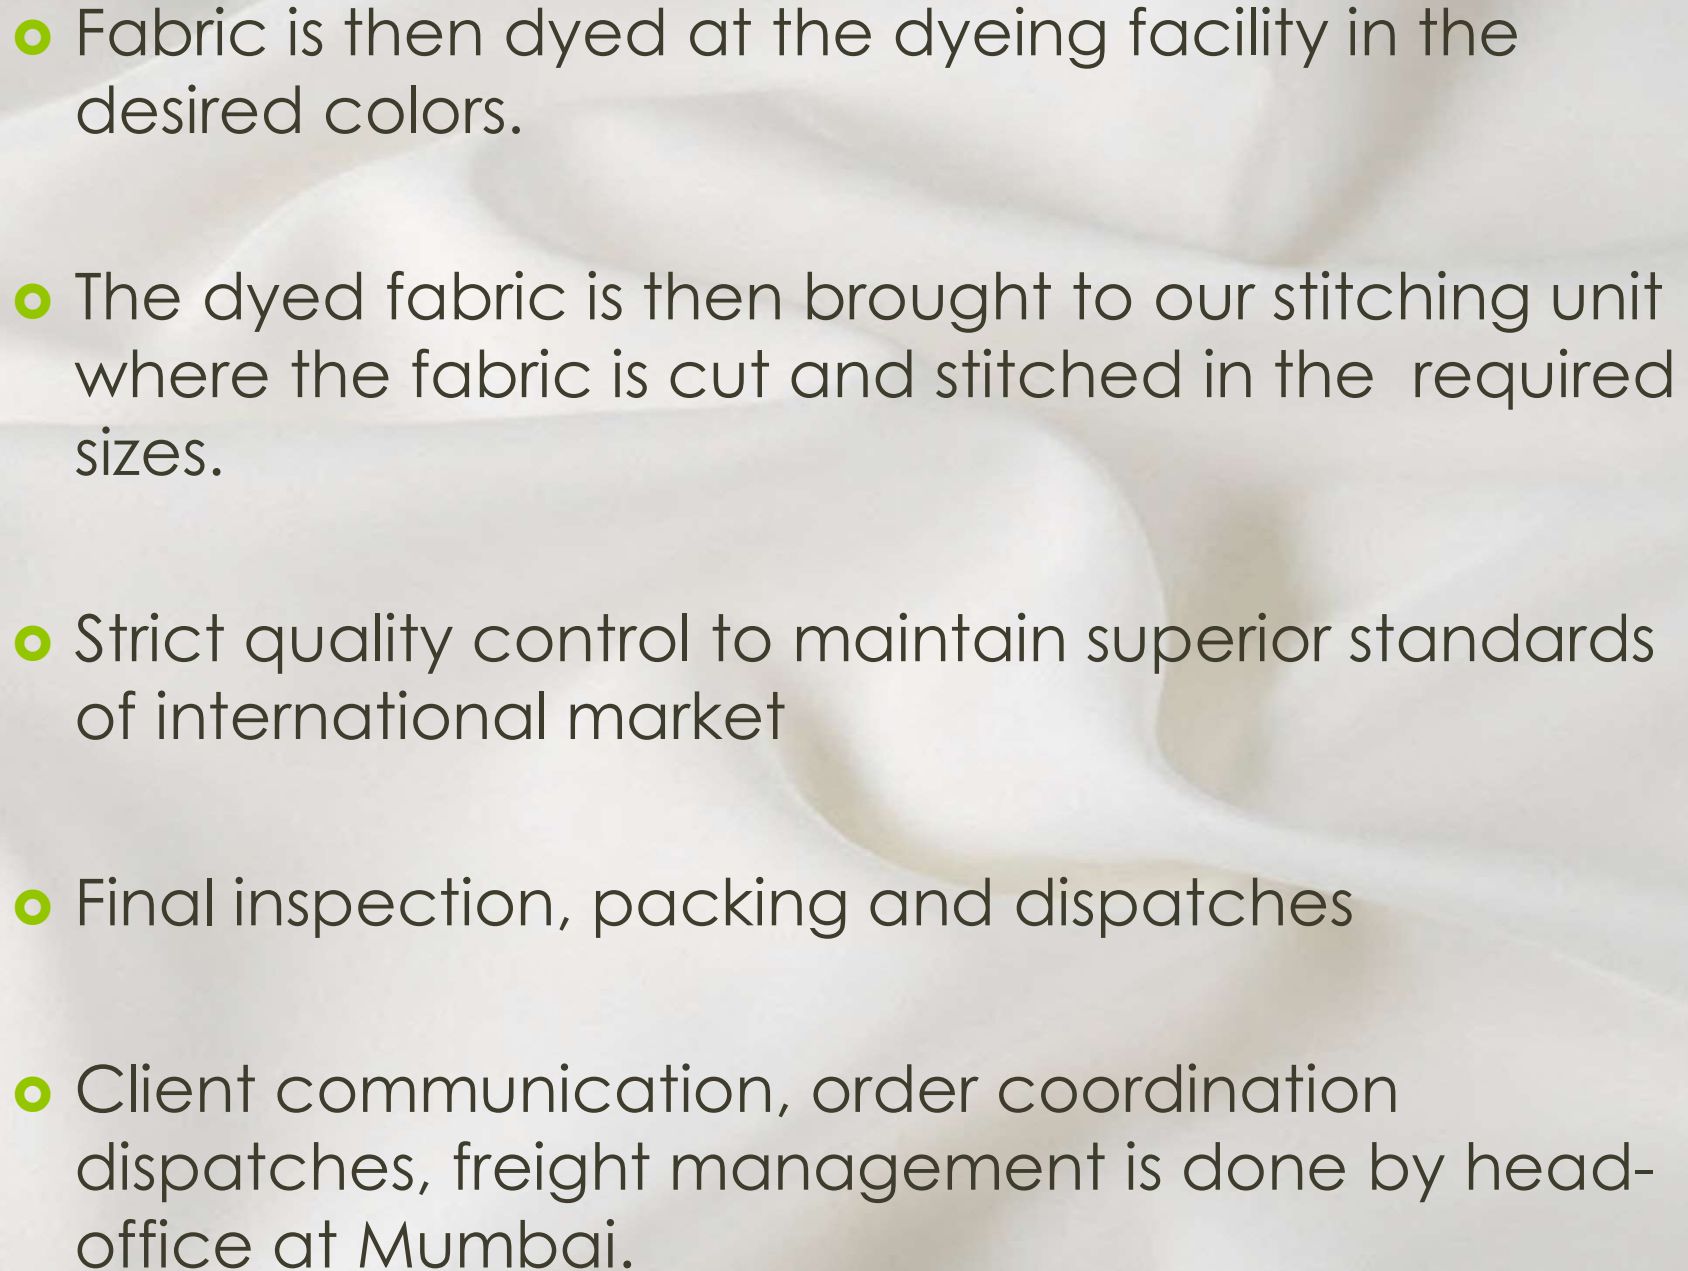

- De-sizing and Scouring- (Chemical washing)
- Bleaching
- Mercerizing
- Shrinking
- Dyeing

Finishing processes

Our Expertise

- At Pak Green we are partnered with the best cotton mills that source only the best quality long staple cotton yarn. Blending with polyester or synthetic is done as required
- This superior yarn is then forwarded to best textile mills for further processing and weaving. Greige Fabric with genuine thread counts are produced based on clients order. Plain, sateen and percale weaves are produced.
- Finishing processes are carried out at separate specialized units.

- Fabric is then dyed at the dyeing facility in the desired colors.
 - The dyed fabric is then brought to our stitching unit where the fabric is cut and stitched in the required sizes.
 - Strict quality control to maintain superior standards of international market
 - Final inspection, packing and dispatches
 - Client communication, order coordination dispatches, freight management is done by head-office at Mumbai.
